
Accidents at Work

Accidents at work

Unfortunately, accidents at work are very common. According to the latest figures from the Health and Safety Executive, 34 million days were lost overall (1.4 days per worker), 28 million due to work-related ill health and 6 million due to workplace injury during 2007/08.

Our personal injury team have a wealth of experience in the following types of cases:

Lifting accidents

Factory accidents

Office accidents

Building site accidents

RSI compensation claims

Warehouse accidents

Machinery accidents

What can I claim for?

If you are injured at work, you may be able to claim for compensation for the injury itself and for any direct financial losses. For further details see what can I claim for?

What will it cost?

Our personal injury team are able to pursue your claim on a no win no fee basis so whether you have tripped at work, been injured using machinery or suffered from a repetitive strain injury, it will not cost you anything.

Could I lose my job?

We are used to dealing with client's anxieties, and understand that this is a serious concern for many people who have had accidents at work. An employer is not allowed to sack you if you are injured in an accident at work. Your employer is legally obliged to have insurance, known as Employers Liability Insurance, to cover them for any accidents at work. In reality it is the company's insurers who would pay any successful claim and not your employer.

I think I may have a claim, what should I do?

The easiest way to find out if you may have a claim and be entitled to compensation is to contact our personal injury team and receive expert advice today.